This globe shows the average temperature anomalies over land between the years of 1910 and 2019 in decades. Temperature anomalies are defined by the difference in temperature at that location between at a given period in time and the average temperature between the years of 1951 and 1980 (chosen by NASA).

The color and height of the spikes are jointly scaled to show how much average temperature from the 1910s to the 2010s. Blue spikes show average while reds, yellows and oranges show temperatures warmer than the average.
